THE OFFICE OF THE GRAND JURY

Should Be Faithful Companion of the Court

SOLEMN OATH TAKEN

Apparent Failures to Measure Up to Legal Standard Pointed Out

A Eureka Springs citizen has something to say about the jury system and gives some reasons for its increasing disfavor under the caption,

SIGNIFICANT Editor Eureka Springs Times:

Circuit Court for the western district of this county convenes at the court house in this city Monday, February 7th. The grand jury is, or should be, the faithful companion of the court during its existence as an organized body, solemnly sworn to examine into alleged crimes and misdemeanors and in the event of sufficient evidence adduced before them to render probable the guilt of the accused, it is their plain duty to indict.

The partiality of friendship, the venom of hatred, or the public clamor, have no place assigned them in the grand jury room.

Without the earnest cooperation of a grand jury the strong protecting arm of the court is paralyzed, justice miscarries, the law becomes inoperative and im-fundamentally the law of strife and it is only by grim energy, indomitable will and moral courage that we lean to better things' is the language of Theodore Roosevelt when commenting upon the federal investigation of land and timber frauds in Washington and Oregon.

FOR DRAINAGE OF ARKANSAS WET LANDS

Six Million Acres Of Fertile Soil May Be Reclaimed

At a recent meeting of the Arkansas State Farmers Union held at Jonesboro, the matter of the drainage of the wet lands of the state was taken up, thoroughly discussed, and the following resolutions unanimously adopted:

Whereas: Within the boundaries of the State of Arkansas there are six million acres of land now unproductive, which, if properly drained would become at once as productive as any land in the United States; and,

Whereas: The farmers of the State of Arkansas are thoroughly alive to the necessity of reclaiming and placing under cultivation, without further delay, every available acre within the state; and,

ITALIAN BLACK HANDS GUILTY

Eleven of Gang Convicted In Ohio

Use Mails to Extort Money From Countrymen — To Federal Prison

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 29 —Heavy penalties were imposed by Judge R. W. Tayler in the federal court today on the principal members of the Ohio band of black hands found guilty of conspiracy to use the mails to extort money from Italians living in Ohio and Indiana. The jury reported this morning.

Salvatore Lima of Marion, the chief of the band, was sentenced to sixteen years imprisonment. Sebastian Lima, his brother, and Giuseppe Ignoffo, his brother-in-law, were sentenced to ten years' imprisonment each. All of these lived in Marion, where the head-

Rogers, Jan.—The outlook in this county at this time was never better for a big fruit crop. The peach and apple trees are in excellent condition, and while it is a little early to feel sure about the apple and peach crops, so far there has been no weather to injure the buds and if nothing happens later to hurt them, this county will have the biggest fruit crop it has ever known. There are more than a dozen large apple orchards within two miles of Rogers.

Arthur Ireland owns a very fine orchard two miles west of town and is talking of procuring enforce economy or prevent unnecessary waste. As an example take any building where electric light is included in the rent. The tenants allow lights to burn for hours at a time and in unoccupied rooms because they feel they are paying for all the burners all the time, when as a matter of fact the lease contemplates only a necessary use of current.

"It should even be possible to make the annual charge for water, under the meter system, less to the householder than on a flat yearly basis, because of the saving in fuel on account of stopping waste, for the chief operating expense of waterworks is the fuel."

FISH FOR CARROLL COUNTY STREAMS

Consignment Secured Through Efforts of Attorney F. O. Butt

Attorney F. O. Butt has been instrumental in securing the promise of a fine shipment of baby fish from the government hatcheries at Neosho. The small fry are due to arrive sometime in the early spring and are for "planting" in the waters of Carroll county. The shipment will consist of black bass and mountain trout.

A few years since, Mr. Butt secured a consignment of black bass which were put in Kings and Osage rivers. Since that time Mr. Butt has had more or less correspondence with the Department of Agriculture at Washington concerning the progress of this former shipment. It is said the trial was not altogether sat-

THE GRAND JURIES

We call attention to an article in another column by Vox Populi which will bear careful reading and calm deliberate consideration. The abuses he complains of are well known to the citizens of the western district of Carroll county, and have been the subject of "cussin" and discussing for several years. Not long ago some one called the attention of a district judge in Cook county, Illinois, to the practice of packing the grand juries which was going on in his circuit—the result was a thorough investigation which resulted in the indictment, trial and punishment of two jury commissioners.

We confess that publicity, has not seemed to help matters complained of by Vox Populi in Eureka Springs.

We do know that bankers are now making quite a showing in the federal prisons. The other day a list was made of those at Leavenworth, Kansas, and thirty men responded to roll call, who were serving time for illegal banking. They hailed from New York to Texas—but Arkansas was not represented. However, in the news items we read of a case in Garland county, Arkansas where a grand jury has just returned an indictment against the president of a defunct bank, that went to the wall four years ago. The indictment charges falsifying the records, and receiving money after the bank was insolvent. So possibly the grand jury conscience may be quickening in Arkansas.

However the abuses complained of by

Vox Populi are matters of great importance to all good citizens. If grand juries can be packed in one case they can in others and that brings discredit on the grand jury system—impels individuals to take the law into their own hands—makes people look with contempt on laws, courts and juries, and robs the law of its majesty and power for good. One of the strongest factors in the building up of a section, is the sense of security and justice provided by the execution of its laws. We have faith that time will right all things, and that justice will even yet, come into her own.

When a crowd of citizens are engaged in a shady proposition, it behooves all the parties to see that none of the gang gets converted. This time last year H. S. Simmons of Newport, was a scheming democratic politician, conspiring to deliver his county to the whisky interests. According to his statement, they got their election commissioners, Ludwig telling him: "Go home and rest assured these men will be appointed." Of course Jackson county went for whisky. Then, merciful heavens, Simmons got religion. The jig was up, as county judge he would issue no licenses, and worse, he came down to Little Rock and let the cat out of the bag. Is he telling the truth? Well, a man who refused $16,000 when he could have had it if he would stay with the license people, certainly is worthy of some credence. Ludwig denies it. So all the people can do is to stand the two men up side by side and believe the one they think is telling the truth.

DELUSIVE ASSAULTS ON TARIFF

The enemies of protection are always busy in their work as destructives and it is their habits to charge all that goes wrong, or seems to be wrong, upon a protective tariff. They are as hostile to protection when prices are abnormally low as when the cost of living is so high throughout the world as to be a matter of general concern. A certain order of facts they avoid, though the points are well defined and of immediate interest. Under the new tariff, as is well known, the duty was removed from hides, which now come in free. But it has just been announced that the price of shoes is to be advanced this spring. The placing of hides on the free list, according to democratic orators and writers, would usher in an era of lower cost in one of the necessities of life. But, in spite of free hides, shoes are to be dearer. The foes of protection ignore this item. They do not attempt to explain it, because an analysis would be an attack on their own position.

The case referred to is not exceptional. In the great coal strike during the first Roosevelt administration congress suspended the duty on coal. According to democratic speakers the duty of 67 cents a ton was the cause of high prices and threatened to bring on a famine in the industry. But the removal of the duty had no effect on the American coal market. When the duty went off in this country foreign shippers marked up their prices. Consequently foreign coal was not ordered. Nothing could be made by dealers or consumers by its importation. Another example dates back to the time when the American duty on coffee was dropped in response to the demand for a free breakfast table. No sooner was coffee admitted free at our ports than the foreign exporters increased their prices so as to cover the new margin of difference. Random talk about a "robber tariff" is freely indulged in by demagogues. Their party has always failed in constructiveness. It is recklessly destructive, and also ignorant of practical results when duties are removed.—Globe Democrat.

Arrangements have been made by the war department for the maneuvers to be held in various parts of the country during the coming summer. It is expected that congress will appropriate $1,350,000 for these joint maneuvers in which the regular forces and the state militia participate. An allotment will be made of $350,000 for coast defense exercises, to be held at forts along the coast in the neighborhood of the big cities and in which a limited force of state militia will participate. The schedule which has been prepared embraces a larger force than has hitherto been engaged in these exercises. The department is convinced that the gathering together in joint practice of state and regular soldiers work a great benefit to both classes of soldiers.

The republican party is responsible for most of the conditions that prevail in this country today, and for the most part republicans "point with pride" as they have been doing for years. If the handwriting is marred in a few spots, just think of that naughty democratic kid who has been incessantly "joggling our elbow."

A commission form of government means an intelligent form of government and the relegation to the past of petty, political, pestiferous job hunters, who have no adaptation for the work required of them. It's a good form of government for any city.

Democrats need not worry over the pranks of some of the kids in the service of the republican administration. It has already been demonstrated that "Mother Taft" is able to apply the slipper to the exact spot needed.

Winter is passing and summer will soon be here. Who knows whether there will be another drouth? Yet, we are about as near the solution of the water question as we were six months ago. Who's to blame?

That "robber tariff" it increases(?) the cost of living. How about those foreign free trade countries where the cost of living is yet higher and the workingman has not and cannot get the price of a square meal?

Many an unsightly spot in Eureka Springs could be made to blossom as a garden if "fertilized" at the rate of one cent a gallon for water shipped from our resort.

More and better water for the city's mains! That's the slogan.

It is rumored that the western district of the county will have a candidate in the field for county treasurer before many days in the person of Frank Willis, one of the Eureka Springs alderman. If this is the case he will make a formidable opponent for some one.

The beautiful weather the first of the week brought Uncle Billie Freeman up on the streets for the first time in several months. He was recently recovered from a long spell of sickness but it has not detracted any from his general appearance, at least not near so much as one would suspect from a man of his advanced age, nearly 96 years.

"What a devil he explained more than once. 'Open everything—throw it to the winds—what? No, I will not do the famous master!'" He gasped and fainted in what seemed to be a fit of "hysteria" and he was carried with enjoyment as he piled roses and carnations and lit's into brass and silver according to his fancy. Once he caught up his buoyant mood to say: "What if the adventurous lady should refuse?" His brow darkened. "She will not—she will come," he decided with an arrogance for which years of success were responsible.

At noon wheels were heard on the terrace gravel and he went out to meet her and lifted her out of the trap.

"You have brought this weather with you from the states, where I hear everything is golden."

He had not released her hand, which he took in welcome. "Leave me a calendar full of days like this when you go, won't you, so that I can call on them when I like?" He had drawn her into his study window and was by her side.

Before them miles and miles of meadowland swayed and rippled and undulated like an inland sea hemmed on all sides by a thick forest; the trees were still in yellow leafage and made a halo of gold around the valleying land. No house was in sight. Directly in front stretched a thick, green turf, and to meet it the stone terrace with pillared, mossy railing.

While the American feasted her eyes on the scene's melting beauty, Tempest talked to her as perhaps he alone of all the world could have talked. He told her tales of—shire in a humorous, mystic fashion; pryed in for her the secrets, the traditions of the country and its humble, pretty legends. From these he passed to the scenes of "The Revelation," his latest novel, laid here, and gave her a sketch of the history of the creation and shall be written! You have my word! But you must be patient. You are a woman of penetration, you must see that a man of moods can't master them all—not all. It takes so much character to do away with one strong habit that the others grow meanwhile and then all of a sudden, as he rises up with one poor, little, unprotected weed in his hand, finds himself in a forest—the others have grown overnight."

The gloom she had in her short acquaintance with him grown to dread was enveloping him.

"Really, Miss Carew, I'm not an eccentric—don't say it in your study. Let me prove to you how common place I am. I'll keep my word, too. You must know that the chief reason your editor wants this absurd article (forgive me) is because it will be the only one—and it shall be yours. Didn't you see the skeletons and skulls of the unfortunate reporters who have been devoured at my gates? Today I wanted the pleasure that I have had to-morrow—"

She showed her perplexity.

"You must have your things, of course—telegraph for them; or better I'll have them telephoned for. Polly can make you comfortable for a day or two. Is it—the article—worth this bit of effort?"

No thought was in Lucy Carew's mind of worth or effort. She knew he could never write about this dark-browed, elusive man—her chief instinct was that she should leave Cravenford, but her will was not with her instinct.

She consented, therefore, that the telephone message should be sent, and to remain at the friendly cottage for a couple of days.

We are none of us so blasé with pleasure or excitement that we cannot bear at least one repetition of a good thing! Miss Carew found that she was quite able to endure the repetition at an early hour of the roses of yesterday and a note from Mr. Tempest. A second autograph from a celebrity gave her no thought of its value in future Tempestiana, and she opened the envelope with only a flutter of personal feeling, of surprise and delight.

It was not a letter, it was a verse short and perfect—one she knew and loved. It ran in clear, heavy script over a sheet of thick paper—the envelope had lain in the roses.

She read it, drank in its fragrance and beauty with the flowers' scent, put the envelope with the letter under the pillow and the roses, to outbloom the still lovely ones of yesterday, side by side on the stand in her low-roofed room, then went down to the waiting carriage.

Mrs. Henly met her and showed her to the study, regarded her with benignant approval, and left her alone. Here in the workshop she waited an hour for the Lord of Cravenford.

Tuesday afternoon the...

anniversary of Mrs. W. A. Green up one of their number planned and perfected a surprise upon her.

Anticipating nothing more than a post card shower, she was looking forward to the hour of the postman's arrival, but some time before he was due a crowd of ladies arrived and took possession of her home. Mrs. Greenup who possesses a sunny, joyous nature accorded them a hearty welcome and appreciated the honor bestowed upon her.

A most happy afternoon was spent. A fine luncheon served by club members was an enjoyable feature of the affair. Mrs. Greenup received many loving testimonials of her popularity, among them a handsome bouquet of carnations and violets. Those present were:

Current Fiction Club

Mrs. Van Allen entertained the Current Fiction Club together with a large party of invited guests Tuesday evening with a parlor lecture by Rev. Frederick Sturgis. The cyclonic disturber of the risibilities, "Ole Peterson," the enormously successful Swedish comedy drama, appears at Eureka opera house on Feb. 17. The mirthful eccentricities of this famous Scandinavian dialect character are augmented by an unexcelled coterie of New York artists, all of whom are experts in fun-making, not a "stick" in the company, not a poor line in the dialogue, not a chestnut or a questionable word, nothing but flashes of prime wit and ludicrously laughable situations interspersed with pleasing specialties. Come and see "Ole Peterson." He is awfully funny.

The revival meeting by Evangelist Coats began at the Baptist church Tuesday evening.
